JONATHAN BELL BOYD

Jonathan Bell Boyd was born in Union County September 5, 1860, and departed this life at his home in Anna, March 19, 1947 at the age of 86 years, 6 months and 14 days. He was the son of Jonathan L. and Almira Johnson Boyd and was the last to survive in this family of five children, consisting of C. Jerry Boyd; James R. Boyd; Martha Corzine and Margaret Porter. He is the last of the Pioneer Boyd family which came here from Knoxville, Tenn., in 1851. The family left Tennessee in the fall of 1851 and after nine weeks with horse and wagon, arrived in Union County by way of Golconda on Christmas Day.

He was married to Lena Bell Davis November 18, 1883, who preceded him in death. To this union five children were born, one dying in infancy. A son, Harry was accidentally killed in 1928 at the age of 38. Surviving are Dr. W. E. Boyd and E. C. Boyd, both of Centralia, Ill., and Mrs. Fred Strobush of London, Wis.

He was married February 14, 1894 to Mary Ellen Watkins of Union County, who survives. Eight children were born to this union, four of whom preceded their father in death. Those who survive are Russell C. Boyd, of Terre Haute, Ind.; Major Collin J. Boyd, Army Occupation, Germany; Mrs. Henry Davis, of Anna, Ill.; and Harmon Arthur Boyd, of Terre Haute, Ind. He leaves also to mourn his passing, twelve grandchildren; ten great grandchildren and a number of other relatives and friends who will long remember him with love and deepest affection.

He professed faith in Christ in early manhood, was baptized and became a member of Big Creek Church. As long as his health permitted, he was active in church work and has attended the Baptist Church throughout his entire life which was spent in Union and Williamson Counties.

Funeral services were conducted at the First Baptist Church in Anna at 1:00 o'clock Saturday, March 22, by the Rev. L. H. Moore, with burial in the Anna Cemetery.

In the book "The Scottish Clans and their septs", five families are listed as septs of the Royal Stewarts, viz., Boyd, France, Garrow Lennox and Monteith.

THE BOYDS

ALAN, a Breton noble, cadet of the ancient counts of Dol and Dinan in Brittany, crossed the channel and was appointed Seneschal of Shropshire by Henry I, and by his third son Walter Fitz-Alan, was the progenitor of the Royal House of Stuart.

Simon Fitz-Alan, a brother of Walter, was the progenitor of the Lords Boyd, Earls of Arran and Lords of Kilmarnock. Sir Robert Boyd, supporter of King Robert Bruce at the battle of Bannockburn, received from the King a grant of the lands of Kilmarnock and Ayrshire.

On July 18, 1454, King James created the second Sir Robert Boyd, "Lord Boyd". During the minority of James III, he was Chancellor or Governor of the realm. Early in 1467 he arranged a marriage of his eldest son, Thomas and the Lady Mary, the King's sister. The King, who had in his childhood been under the tutelage of Archbishop Kennedy, was taken away from that dignity by Lord Boyd in October of 1466 - the action being approved later by Parliament. When the young King reached marriageable age, Lord Boyd sent his oldest son, Sir Thomas to Denmark to arrange for a bride for the King. A contract was entered into by which the Danish Princess Margaret was to be the bride with a dowry of ten thousand florins but the King could raise only one fifth of the sum. As remainder of the dowry, the Danish King placed in pawn the Shetland and Orkney Islands. These still remain a part of Scotland to this day.

On the return of Sir Thomas and the bride, he was met at the wharf by his wife who informed him that the King had developed a great hatred for him and sought to kill him. Sir Thomas and the Princess fled to Denmark, Lord Boyd to England and the vast estates of the Boyd's were confiscated by the crown. The estates were later restored to Thomas' son James who became the second Lord Boyd.

In all there were nineteen Lords Boyd. On account of the last title holder's espousal to the cause of Prince Charles Stuart, at Culloden, the title was taken away. But for this, there would have been twenty Lords Boyd.

There are several collateral branches of the Boyds but it is impossible to trace the connections because of the custom of naming children for close relatives. The names of Robert, Thomas, Samuel, James, John and William occur repeatedly in all lines.

Many descendants of the Boyds emigrated to northern Ireland in 1657 and 1658 during the time of Cromwell, settling in Londonderry, Antrim and Down counties. From these districts came the Boyds of America. One author states that there were eight generations of these transplanted Scoto-Irish, totaling 387 members in the colonies, many of them in Pennsylvania, New York and Virginia. There were 114 Boyds in the Continental armies of the Revolution.

The date of arrival of our Boyds in the colonies is uncertain but there is reason to believe it was in 1718 when a Rev. William Boyd arrived with a communication from over two hundred Scotch in Ireland desirous of settling in America. The communication stated that they were good Presbyterians and desired to leave Ireland to avoid paying one tenth of their income to the established church. Several signers were Boyds - viz. Thomas, Samuel, Robert, Alexander and William.

Our ancestor Thomas and others settled in Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Until his death on April 12, 1777, he remained there. A posthumous will signed by Thomas Walker and John Neal, witnessed by Samuel Wright, certified that the deceased left all his property to his wife, Jane and the children. Peter Hoofnagle recorded the will April 22, 1777.

Thomas' son Samuel married and had a son Thomas. His wife died and he married Jane Moore at Northumberland, Pennsylvania on September 2, 1799, in a ceremony "according to the rites prescribed by the Presbyterian church in America," by David Wiley.

Two and possibly four of Samuel's ten children were born in Pennsylvania. Later Samuel moved to Stark county, Ohio, and then to Tuscarawas county, and finally to Holmes county. In the spring of 1847 he and several members of his family moved to Madison township, Daviess county, Indiana, where he lived until his death on December 24, 1856.

The older Boyds were all Presbyterians in religion and Jeffersonian democrats in politics. Samuel was a "Judge of the Court" in Stark county, Ohio; William, a son, and Joseph, a grandson, were commissioners in Daviess county, Indiana. On the whole the Boyds were content to be just good hard-working, patriotic citizens. Nowhere is there an instance of crime or court action of any kind registered against their record.

There were five of our Boyds in the army of the Revolution, viz John, two Thomases and two, possibly three Samuels - all from Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Thomas was Adjutant to Colonel John Boyd, Seventh battalion, Lancaster county militia, until his death on April 12, 1777. Samuel, son of Thomas, was a private in Captain Boggs' company, Lancaster County militia in 1778. On August 26, 1780, he became a captain of the fifth company, 8th battalion, Lancaster county militia under Lieutenant Colonel James Ross and held the same commission upon reenlistment on April 15, 1783. For these services the Continental Army paid the sum of $15.00 a month.

Peter Hoofnagle recorded the will April 22, 1777.

Thomas' son Samuel married and had a son Thomas. His wife died and he married Jane Moore at Northumberland, Pennsylvania on September 2, 1799, in a ceremony "according to the rites prescribed by the Presbyterian church in America," by David Wiley.

Two and possibly four of Samuel's ten children were born in Pennsylvania. Later Samuel moved to Stark county, Ohio, and then to Tuscarawas county, and finally to Holmes county. In the spring of 1847 he and several members of his family moved to Madison township, Daviess county, Indiana, where he lived until his death on December 24, 1856.

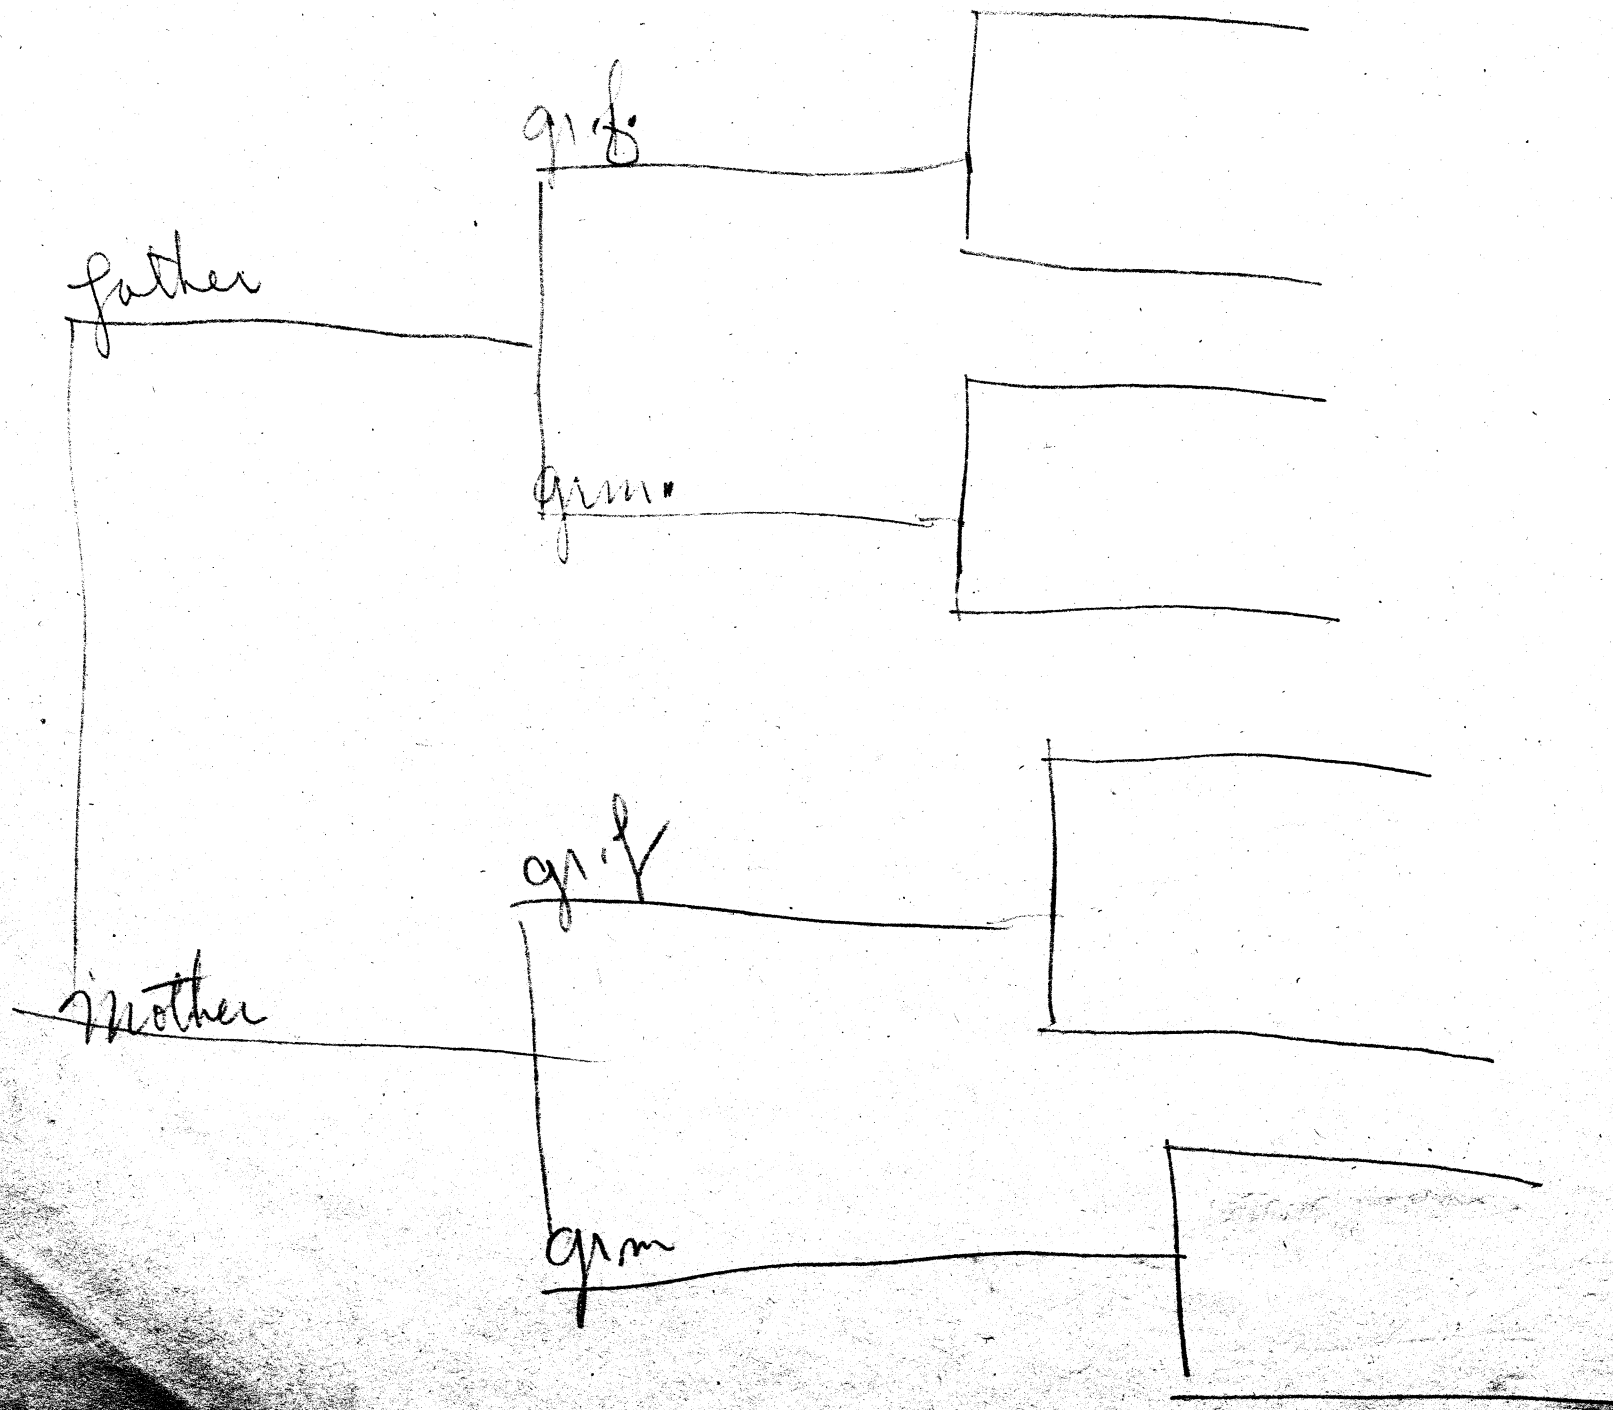

The older Boyds were all Presbyterians in religion and Jeffersonian democrats in politics. Samuel was a "Judge of the Court" in Stark county, Ohio; William, a son, and Joseph, a grandson, were commissioners in Daviess county, Indiana. On the whole the Boyds were content to be just good hard-working, patriotic citizens. Nowhere is there an instance of crime or court action of any kind registered against their record.

There were five of our Boyds in the army of the Revolution, viz: John, two Thomases and two, possibly three Samuels - all from Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Thomas was Adjutant to Colonel John Boyd, Seventh Battalion, Lancaster county militia, until his death on April 12, 1777. Samuel, son of Thomas, was a private in Captain Boggs' company, Lancaster county militia in 1778. On August 26, 1780, he became a captain of the fifth company, Eighth Battalion, Lancaster county militia under Lieutenant Colonel James Ross and held the same commission upon reenlistment on April 15, 1783. For these services the Continental Army paid the sum of $15.00 a month.
